Kafka's choice of a cockroach was said to be random and unintentional; however, the fact that the author selected the lowest and most hated of insects, portrayed as dirty, disease-ridden, and disgusting, is profoundly symbolic. By turning Gregor into a cockroach rather than another creature, Kafka sets up a situation in which it is impossible for Gregor's family to accept him and even more importantly, this makes Gregor feel guilty and trapped which enhances the psychological tension.

Themes:
Alienation
The Absurd
Irrational World
Angst
Communication
Existence vs. Essence
